

Anya

Anya was a very close and dear friend.

Usually you get friends when you are growing up, it is very hard to become friends when you are an adult, let alone when you move to a different country.

And I am very grateful that I met a friend. Anya was a very loyal and dependable person.

Her devotion to her family – her father, daughter, and grandson was touching and inspiring.

To me she was the face of Suffield Academy. She always helped new people navigate the culture in the school and tried to make people feel at home in a new place.

Anya was easily amused by almost anything and strongly opinionated.

She was always looking for something new to read or watch or talk about.

I miss my friend and hope she is at peace wherever she is.
